

----- A: You can use the URL extraction tool from Sysinternals to obtain the required key value. As well as many other methods, depending on the web server setup. Q: How to remove an element from a list in python I would like to remove a specific element from a list of lists in python. Here is a sample of what my list looks like: mylist = [['A','B','C'], ['B','C'], ['C'], ['C','A'], ['C','B']] I am trying to see if I can remove the 'C' from the first list. A: Assuming you're only wanting to remove things that are a part of the middle element, you can do this: def remove_middle(first, middle, last): return middle[:-1] + [middle[-1]] + [last] def remove_middle(lst): for i, l in enumerate(lst): if l in lst[-1]: return lst[i:] + [lst[i + 1:]] return [] lst = remove_middle(mylist) print(lst) # [['A', 'B', 'C'], ['B', 'C'], ['C', 'A'], ['C', 'B']] We have become an information-based society, and the production and the flow of information is creating huge inequalities. The writer, the poet, the artist or the dabbler is becoming increasingly outnumbered by those obsessed with the acquisition of knowledge and those who can produce and reproduce the necessary information, who must deliver it to those who can make useful decisions. In our world, only 0.2% of the people hold 70% of the capital. Did you ever consider that that an inhuman system? All the information we are getting is about those 0.2%, and most of what we know of the 99.8% comes from what they tell us. We don't know anything about them, and what we know is skewed to make them look good. Information is knowledge. The more information you have, the more knowledge you have
