The History of t; Q: On Windows Server 2012 and 2003, how do I restore the registry from a volume shadow copy I have a Windows 2012/2003 machine that was recently decommissioned (re-purposed) and we are in the process of moving the data to a new backup device. We have backups stored on tape and drive-to-tape (used to backup the disk before offload) and it is a large backup. The drive that was on the target machine failed and the backup wasn't completed.

The startup flag is set and it is not able to complete the shutdown process. We have a bootable ISO that has VSS. If we boot from this image, is there a way to restore the registry to disk so that the drive could be replaced. I have booted to this image several times, but upon shutdown it would reboot. A: There is no way to do this if you don't have an image of the original disk (other than writing down everything you have done to it). If you have created that image then a solution would be as follows: shut down the machine remove the disk drive create an image of the disk use the image created in the step 2 to restore the disk As long as you have an image of the original disk you should be able to access it and install Windows. If the disk is now not recognised by the BIOS then you will need to follow this thread
